A WORD FROM THE Author

Dear Friend Traveler,

Whether you plan to go to Paris for business or leisure, there is a 95% chance you will need to book a hotel room.

If you are like me and my family, you will look for the best possible deal on the web. You will compare properties and rates, and look at many pictures and rates to select the most promising and most affordable hotel.

How do we all find the information we need? We can either (a) go to the large travel sites owned by big corporations, or (b) find the hotels' own web sites and check the properties directly.

Large travel web sites usually do a decent job at showing us a good number of hotels, and the basic details we need on each. They ease up the process of comparing and booking. When we are ready to book a room, they take our credit card, charge it, and pocket their commissions. These commissions are included in the room rate, and range from 10% to 50% of what we pay. The hotel only sees part of our monies.

The other way to go consists in searching the hotels' own web sites, and making comparisons. Hotels publish decent information on their own web sites, and usually show many pictures of their rooms. Their rates are clearly displayed. Today most hotels allow us to check for available rooms instantly, and book online. When we pay directly to the hotels, they see about 100% of our monies. This in turn allows them to offer us discounted 'internet rates' or 'Internet Specials'. But finding the hotels' official web sites on the Net can be time-consuming and bothersome.

So what would be the surest way to have the best of both worlds?

- A large choice of hotels
- Access to the hotels' official web sites
- The best rates available
- Good quality information (honest and complete)

I put together this list of 75 Parisian hotels of the 2-star category. I found the address of each hotel's official web site, and their phone/fax numbers. I lived for about 30 years in Paris, so I wrote a no-hype description of each hotel's location. I noted the lowest/highest rates published on the hotel's web site.

This first list will grow. I will add more hotels. I will update the rates. I will soon put together a list of 3-star hotels. But as of today, you can use this list immediately on the web to deal directly with the hotels — and without the aggravation of having to search for their web sites.

I hope you find this tool convenient, and I encourage you to share it with family, friends, and co-workers, so that they can benefit too.

Kind regards,

HOW TO USE THIS BOOK AND WHAT

THE HOTELS MENTIONED IN THIS BOOK APPEAR IN 3 LISTS, SORTED:

- + By alphabetical order + By rates, from the least to the most expensive + By locations

EACH LIST SHOWS THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION, FOR EACH OF THE HOTELS:

1. The hotel name
2. The hotel's phone and fax numbers
3. The URL (address) of the hotel's official web site
4. A simple description of the hotel's location in Paris
5. The lowest rate published on the hotel's web site
6. The highest rate published on the hotel's web site
7. The 3rd list also shows the district where the hotel is located

THE HOTEL'S NAME

This name may be different from the web site's address. Hotels sometimes prefer a web site name which reflects better the area where they are located in Paris.

THE HOTEL'S PHONE AND FAX NUMBERS

The phone and fax numbers are preceded by the international prefix for France (33) and a numeral (1) which designates 'Paris'.

When you call Paris from a foreign country, first dial the code to get out of your country (011 in the US). Then dial 331 for France and Paris. Then dial the 8-digit telephone number.

E.g.: 331 4723-3490

When you are in Paris, dial 01, then the 8-digit number.

E.g.: 01 4723-3490

URL (ADDRESS) OF THE HOTEL'S OFFICIAL WEB SITE

If you click on any URL shown in the list, you will be immediately directed to the hotel's web site. This is a 100% direct access, there is no go-between. You will land on the hotels' official web sites, where you will see the rooms, and check the rates and locations on maps. From there, you may book your room or write to the owners if you like what they offer.

DESCRIPTION OF THE HOTEL'S LOCATION IN PARIS

I found out that people unfamiliar with Paris would not generally know what to expect from the area where a hotel is located.

Also, travel sites and hotel sites may be rather vague or inaccurate in their descriptions of the locations of hotels in relation to the main Parisian hallmarks.

I know Paris very well, I lived there for a long time. For each hotel I wrote a brief description of the position of the hotel in relation to the nearest monuments and hallmarks, and the metro stations nearby. I sometimes added a comment on the neighborhood.

These descriptions are not hyped up, they are accurate.

LOWEST AND HIGHEST RATES PUBLISHED ON THE HOTEL'S WEB SITE

I noted the highest and lowest rates published by the hotels on their own web sites.

As you will see the lowest rate is sometimes 3-4 times as low as the highest. Why?

The lowest rate usually is the rate for a SINGLE room, single or double occupancy.

The highest rate can be that of a TRIPLE ROOM or a QUATRUPLER ROOM or a JUNIOR SUITE.

Rates vary depending on the hotel's location, comfort, room sizes, season specials, etc.

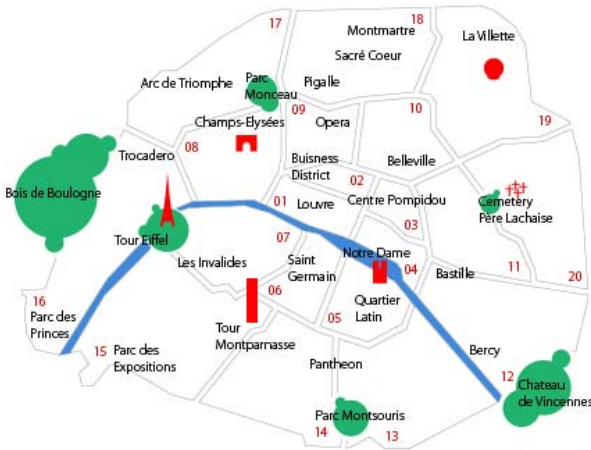

A hotel which offers relatively high rates during most of the year, may offer incredible value deals during the month of August. If they publish such super-discounted rates on their web site, I will have included the lowest rate in the list.

Check the rates on the web sites: you will often be surprised by the bargain-basement prices offered by hotels to travelers who take the time to deal with them directly.

For your information, most rate lists on hotel sites show a "Rack Price" or "Public Rate": look for the discounted rates, not the rack rates. Rack prices are full prices, shown mostly for legal reasons.

Paris districts

AND HOW ARE THEY NUMBERED

Copyright © Paris Eiffel Tower News

A district ('arrondissement' in French) is an administrative division of the city. There are 20 districts in Paris, numbered from 1 to 20.

The ZIP code for Paris is '75'. To allow the Post Office to sort out the mail more efficiently, this number is followed by a 3-digit number which identifies the district number.

E.g.:

75020 for the 20th district.

75001 for the 1st district.

The 20 districts are arranged in a spiral starting from the center of Paris. Not unlike a snail shell. The 1st district is at the center of the shell. The 12th, 13th and 20th districts lean against the East section of the rim.

Paris size

ARE YOU EVER FAR AWAY FROM DOWNTOWN?

There is a slight misconception about Paris: that unless you stay directly in St Germain des Prés, or near the Louvre Museum, you are far from downtown. Not really so.

Of course, staying at a hotel located in St Germain des Prés is a convenience in terms of having all the St Germain des Prés fun stuff handy. On the other hand, you still have to take the metro to go to the Opera Garnier area (which straddles the 2nd and 9th districts). Conversely, if you stay in the Opera district and you wish to visit Le Louvre, you're in for a short metro ride, or a 20-minute walk.

Either way, you are never far from your destination. The metro system is really well designed and maintained, and it takes usually no more than 25 minutes to travel from a peripheral location to the center of Paris. Then walk to your final destination. Paris is made to be discovered on foot, and the metro allows you to land quickly in any neighborhood.

Furthermore, each district has its own beauty and specific attractions.

Take the 20th, for instance: it lies in the Eastmost area of the city, you could think it is so remote and far from everything. True, the Louvre Museum is 25 minutes away by metro. Yet, the 20th district has much to offer in terms of architectural curiosities, quaint little streets and neighborhoods, local entertainment, and (I like that!) quietness. To which you could add generally cheaper hotel rates.

I advise you not to restrict your hotel search solely to the central area. You may be missing an opportunity to benefit from better rates and quieter nights some place else.

Compare PRICES

YOU UNDERSTOOD THIS BOOK WAS NOT ABOUT SELLING YOU ANY HOTEL. It just gives you an easy, direct access to the hotels' official web sites so that you can check their direct rates. Do not hesitate to compare their direct rates with the rates offered on the large travel sites.

If the direct rates are the more expensive ones, I would encourage you to send an e-mail to the hotel, and ask them if they are willing to lower their rates to match those of (name of travel site) from (date of arrival) to (date of departure) for (number of persons) and (type and number of rooms).

The hotel may very well select to match the rate offered by the travel site you checked. Allow 24 hours for a reply.

Compare PHOTOS AND INFORMATION

- This book does not feature any hotel reviews: it describes the hotels' locations in Paris.
- To find out what other travelers think about a specific hotel, go to www.tripadvisor.com, and check the reviews.
- Then go to the hotel's official web site, and check the direct rates offered. Make up your own mind.
- This list is meant to empower you, to give you back the power of choice. Use it to compare and get the best deal available for yourself and your family.

E-mailing TO HOTELS

When you send an e-mail to a hotel with a view to getting more information, or discussing their rates, do not forget to include in your e-mail:

- Your first name and last name
- Your anticipated date of arrival
- The number of nights you intend to stay
- The type of room you want

Then:

- Your special questions.

If you have seen better rates offered elsewhere online, state exactly where so that hotel can verify.

The personnel at the booking desk will usually take 24 hours to answer your e-mail. If you haven't received an answer 24 hours later, nudge by re-sending your mail — or find another hotel which is more cooperative.

The Louvre Museum

Booking ONLINE

Most usually, hotels offer you the possibility to book your room directly on their web sites.

Online booking allows the hotel personnel to focus on serving hotel guests better. This is why most hotels offer 'Internet Specials' — to encourage you to book through their web sites.

PARIS HOTELS: HOW THE STAR RATINGS

Really Work

This article is a re-print of an article I already published on www.Paris-Eiffel-Tower-News.com I decided to include it in this book since the French hotel ratings often are a mystery to hotel guests. It seemed appropriate to give you a clearer view of the system, so that you could make an educated decision before booking your hotel.

I wrote it mostly in the form of a Q&A to make it easier to read.

WHAT IS THE TRUE MEANING OF THE '2 STAR' AND '3 STAR' RATINGS DISPLAYED BY PARIS HOTELS ON THEIR WEB SITES? CAN YOU RELY ON THEM TO SELECT THE RIGHT HOTEL?

As I wrote earlier in another article re-published by various web sites (a copy of which you can find at www.paris-eiffel-tower-news.com/editorials/paris-editorial-comparing-hotel-rating-systems.htm), the hotel rating system in France works on a specific set of criteria.

Hotels are categorized (their number of stars) based on their compliance with this set of criteria.

The French rating system differs widely from the many systems used by commercial travel web sites to rate hotels. Comparing the French system with commercial star ratings amounts to comparing apples with cabbage.

Basic differences

There are three basic reasons why all these ratings are not comparable:

1. The French rating system acts as a single standard: all hotels across France are categorized on the basis of a single system. A 3-star in Paris will have to comply with almost the same criteria as a 3-star in the countryside. Comparability between hotels is 98% ensured. In other words, whether you travel to Paris or to the sunny city of Nice, 3-star hotels will show about the same basic characteristics here and there.
2. The French rating system is not born out of mercantile purposes but framed by French lawmakers. Because this system has no basis in money, no hotel can be 'upgraded a star or two' just because it pays a fatter booking commission to a web site operator. A hotel qualifies under French law for a specific star category, not for the next one up. Period.
3. Lastly, and this is the most important factor, the French rating system does not measure quality but quantity. Quality is in part a matter of opinion. Quantity is measurable and verifiable.

The French hotel rating system uses a total set a 22 criteria and sub-criteria to measure the presence or absence of certain features in the hotel, and the square footage it devotes to various spaces.

Based on these objective measurements, the hotel is given its stars by the authorities.

The owners may of course remodel their hotel, and apply for a star upgrade. The review process will be based on the same criteria as before, and the re-rating will be decided on the basis of compliance with the same objective measurements.

The nitty gritty

I will compare the room requirements for a 2-star hotel, and those for a 3-star hotel.

To make it more legible, I will proceed in the form of a Q&A.

Number of rooms

Q. HOW MANY ROOMS MUST A 2-STAR HOTEL HAVE?

A. A minimum of 7. As long as a hotel features 7 rooms fulfilling the exact requirements of the 2-star category, it fulfills this condition. It may have more than 7 rooms of course.

Q. HOW MANY ROOMS MUST A 3 STAR HOTEL HAVE?

A. A minimum of 10, but if the hotel can prove that its building may not technically house 10 rooms, the law provides that this number can go down to 7.

Surface area of the rooms

Q. WHAT MUST BE THE MINIMUM SQUARE FOOTAGE OF THE ROOMS OF A 2-STAR HOTEL?

A. It depends on the number of persons which can be bedded in the room considered. The following table summarizes the minimum room surface area requirements as a function of the number of persons bedded per room. Note: surface figures may not include the bathroom surface area.

Number of persons bedded	Minimum surface area	Special conditions applying?
1 person room (single)	8 square meters (80 sq.ft)
2 person room (double)	9 square meters (90 sq.ft)
3 person room (triple)	11 sq. meters (110 sq. ft)	Yes
4 person room (quadruple)	14 sq. meters (140 sq.ft)	Yes

Special conditions apply to 3 and 4 person rooms: if the beds for the 3 rd and 4th persons are fold-away beds or sofas, the minimum surface requirement of a room can be reduced by 1 square meter (10 sq.ft).

Q. WHAT IS THE MINIMUM SQUARE FOOTAGE OF THE ROOMS OF A 3-STAR HOTEL?

A. Just as for a 2-star, the minimum surface requirements for the rooms of a 3-star hotel depends on the number of persons a room can accommodate. Note: surface figures may not include the bathroom surface area.

Number of persons bedded	Minimum surface area	Special Conditions applying?
1 person room (single)	9 square meters (90 sq.ft)
2 person room (double)	10 square meters (100 sq.ft)
3 person room (triple)	12 sq. meters (120 sq. ft)	Yes
4 person room (quadruple)	15 sq. meters (150 sq.ft)	Yes

Note: The same Special Conditions as for a 2-star hotel apply.

Q. THE HOTEL WE LOOKED AT ON THE WEB OFFERS BUNK BEDS. HOW IS THAT POSSIBLE?

A. The law provides that hotels with more than 1 star may not offer bunk beds to their guests, except if only open during the high season (this applies to resort hotels which open only a few months a year). If the hotel you looked at is in Paris and offer bunk beds, it's a 1-star or no-star hotel.

Q. THE SQUARE FOOTAGE OF MY HOTEL ROOM DIDN'T SEEMS TO MEET THE REQUIREMENTS. WHY?

A. Hotels which were in operation before the coming into effect of the law (Feb. 1986) may still qualify for their star category so long as their rooms' size are not short more than 10% of the category standard room size if building new bathrooms in the rooms made it impossible for the hotel to satisfy the minimum surface requirements.

Insulation and soundproofing

Q. DOES THE LAW REQUIRE MY 2-STAR HOTEL TO HAVE SHUTTERS?

A. No, neither 2-star hotels, nor 3-star hotels are required to have shutters. If such hotels do not have shutters, they are however required to provide an in-room device to block the light (curtains).

Q. DOES THE LAW REQUIRE THAT MY HOTEL ROOM BE CARPETED?

A. Not strictly in these terms. The law provides that room floor be covered with the proper material to "ensure adequate soundproofing". If your hotel has hardwood floors but you do not hear your neighbors' walking over your head, your hotel is in compliance with the law. The standard of "adequate floor soundproofing" applies to both 2-star and 3-star hotels.

Q. DOES THE LAW PROVIDE THAT ROOMS BE SOUNDPROOFED?

A. Yes. The law states that "All technical measures must be taken to ensure sufficient soundproofing pursuant to building codes". In other words, if you hear your neighbor sneezing, the walls are probably not adequately soundproofed, and the hotel is at fault.

You may also find yourself in a situation where an obnoxious neighbor is talking too loud. In that case, soundproofing would not be defective but your neighbor's behavior would. Consider knocking at his/her door to ask him/her to pipe down (politely).

Q. OUR ROOM OVERLOOKED A VERY BUSY STREET. THE WINDOWS WERE NOT DOUBLE-GLAZED THE NOISE WAS VERY BOTHERING US EVEN WITH WINDOWS SHUT. IS THIS NORMAL?

A. It depends on the local building codes. The law states: "All technical measures must be taken to ensure sufficient soundproofing pursuant to building codes". If the building codes do not mandate that all windows be equipped with double-glazing, then the hotel may avoid the expense. You have two options : either ask to be boarded in a room overlooking the courtyard, or change hotel.

Q. WHAT KIND OF SANITARY EQUIPMENT SHOULD MY ROOM HAVE?

A. All hotels are required to equip their rooms with a sink with running hot and cold water. Since 2-star and 3-star hotels have different other requirements, the following table summarizes everything.

	2 stars	3 stars	Special Conditions?
Bidet (small, knee-level washtub)	In min. 40% of rooms with no private shower/bathtub	In min. 40% of rooms with no private shower/bathtub
Shower stall or enclosed bathroom	In min. 40% of the rooms	In min. 80% of the rooms	(1)
Minimum surface area of enclosed bathrooms	2 sq. meters (20 sq.ft)	2.5 sq. meters (25 sq.ft)

(1) The law mentions various special exemptions when the hotel was already in operations when the law was enacted.

Q. OUR BATHROOM WAS SO SMALL, IT WAS ALMOST IMPOSSIBLE TO MOVE ABOUT IN IT. HOW COME?

A. As indicated in the table above, the law sets the surface area of the bathrooms to a minimum of 20 sq.ft in a 2-star hotel, and 25 sq.ft in a 3-star hotel. Your hotel bathroom must have had these dimensions, otherwise the hotel would not have been awarded their stars.

Always check the photos on the hotel's web site before booking, and email your questions to the hotel in case of doubt. If you are disappointed on arrival, ask to be switched to a different room, or change hotel.

Lighting system

Q. MY ROOM SEEMED DARK. WHAT IS THE MINIMUM LIGHTING STANDARD?

A. The law provides that rooms in all 2-star and 3-star hotels be equipped with at least 1 main light, and 1 headboard light per guest. The lighting installation must be of a minimum power of 15 watts/sq.meter (15 watts per 10 sq.ft). In 3-star hotels, the table-desk must have its own lighting fixture. All 3-star hotels must also allow their guests to turn the main light source of the room on and off from at least one of the beds.

Q. WHAT KIND OF ELECTRICAL INSTALLATION SHOULD A BATHROOM OR PRIVATE SHOWER HAVE?

A. The law provides that in all hotels, bathrooms must be lit by at least 1 lightbulb of 75 watts, and equipped with 1 razor electrical plug. The law mandates that no electrical equipment shall be installed in such a way as to allow a person sitting in a bathtub to reach an electrical switch or outlet.

Q. OUT OF MY ROOM, THE CORRIDOR WAS VERY DARK. IS IT NORMAL?

A. The electrical equipment of all common parts in any hotel must have a minimum power of 10 watts/sq. meter. This figure goes down to 5 watts/sq. meter in the corridors.

Telephone

Q. SHOULD I BE ABLE TO USE THE PHONE OUT OF MY ROOM?

A. All 2-star and 3-star hotels must offer a public phone booth. The law states that this booth should be enclosed and soundproofed. The law adds however that in 2-star hotels, the hotel is allowed to install a public phone on a wall without enclosing it.

Q. THE PHONE SYSTEM IN MY ROOM WAS OUT-OF-ORDER. IS IT NORMAL?

A. No, the hotel should have repaired it. The law states that all rooms in 2-star and 3-star hotels must feature a phone system allowing guests to call the switchboard and other rooms, as well as to dial a phone number on the telecom network. If the law mandates all rooms to be equipped this way, it obviously implies that this equipment should be in good working order.

Elevators

Q. SHOULD MY HOTEL BE EQUIPPED WITH AN ELEVATOR?

A. If it is a 2-star hotel and it has at least 5 floors (ground floor incl.), yes. If it is a 3-star hotel and it has at least 4 floors (ground floor incl.), yes

Note: the law also provides that in case of a duly proven technical impossibility, the hotel may be exempted from having to offer an elevator.

Q. THE ELEVATOR WAS SO SMALL! IS IT NORMAL?

A. It is legal, as inconvenient as it might be. The law does not state the minimum size of the elevator floor. Remember that most buildings in Paris were built before elevators became common currency. In a very large percentage of cases, buildings with elevators had to be retrofitted, oftentimes by cutting into their staircases.

Heating and air-conditioning

Q. I WAS IN PARIS DURING SUMMERTIME, AND MY HOTEL ROOM HAD NO AIR-CONDITIONING. HOW CAN THAT BE SINCE IT WAS A 3-STAR HOTEL?

A. The law provides that all 2-star and 3-star hotels have to be equipped with heating systems or air-conditioning systems. This is important: if your hotel was equipped with electric heaters or a central heating system, it is in compliance with the law, even though it didn't have air-conditioning.

Remember that France is situated in a "temperate climate zone". Air-conditioning is still relatively "new" in this country, though A/C installation services have been operating there since over 30 years. A/C is simply not part of the French culture. On the contrary, French people generally do not like A/C, and often catch a cold when they are in a cold A/C'ed environment. Traditionally, French households open their windows to let fresh air in their homes -- come summer or winter. Heating is a different story: French homes and apartments have been equipped with central heating systems for some 80 years, and individual electrical heaters started to become a staple about 25 years ago. Here is a case where the law was modeled after a historical tradition.

Q. THE WEB SITE OF THE HOTEL ADVERTISES THEIR ROOMS ARE AIR-CONDITIONED. YET, WHEN WE ARRIVED IN PARIS, NO ROOMS WERE AIR-CONDITIONED.

A. If the web site specifically advertises the rooms are air-conditioned, the hotel is at fault. But be sure to check one thing: the hotel's web site may mention that air-conditioning is part of their "Services". This usually means that the rooms are not air-conditioned, but that the hotel makes portable air-conditioning units available to their guests.

Paris hotel owners are becoming a lot more aware of the needs and requirements of American tourists. Many of the hotels have bought individual A/C units in order to accommodate their guests' preferences.

Q. SHOULD THERE BE AN ENGLISH-SPEAKING PERSON AT THE FRONT DESK?

A. French law makes it mandatory for the front desk of a 2-star hotel to be attended by a person speaking at least 1 foreign language, but it does not state that this must be the English language. For a 3-star hotel, the law requires that at least 2 foreign languages be spoken at the front desk, and one of these foreign languages must be the English language.

Q. WE SELECTED A 2-STAR HOTEL, AND WE WERE WONDERING IF ROOM SERVICE WILL BE OFFERED. THERE IS NO MENTION OF THAT ON THEIR WEB SITE.

A. The law only requires 3-star hotels to offer their guests the possibility to be served their breakfast in their rooms. No such obligation is made to 2-star hotels. E-mail the hotel and ask them what is their policy in this regards.

Q. WHAT DOES THE LAW SAY IN REGARDS TO SERVING BREAKFAST IN A PARIS HOTEL?

A. All hotels are required to serve breakfast. In 2-star hotels, breakfast is served in a breakfast room. At the discretion of the hotel management, it can also be served in the rooms. In the 3-star category, all hotel must service breakfast in a breakfast room and in guests' rooms.

The Pont Neuf and the tip of Ile de la Cité

Q. IS A PARIS HOTEL REQUIRED TO SERVE LUNCH OR DINNER?

A. French law does not mandate 2-star and 3-star hotels to have catering facilities. Only 4-star and 4-star luxury must have such facilities.

Facilities, installations, and features for disabled folks

French law only requires that new buildings be equipped with proper entrances, elevators, and access facilities for disabled persons. Most building in Paris are over 80 years old. At the time, the French society did not care adequately for its disabled folks. A number of Parisian hotels offer one or two rooms on the ground floor to accommodate the needs of their wheelchair-bound guests. Accessing other floors may be a problem when the size of the elevator is small. As I mentioned earlier, elevators were integrated in buildings long after the latter were erected, and the space in an elevator is often insufficient to allow for a wheelchair.

Hotel bathrooms are usually not equipped with handles, and I rarely observed raised toilet seats.

As a general rule, I found that hotel personnel are very aware that disabled persons sometimes need a helping hand, and they are ready to help with luggage, wheelchairs, and other requirements.

Codes and stars

These legal requirements only determine the star category of the hotel. They are complemented by the building codes, which are much more voluminous. Building codes do not determine the star category of a hotel.

A last reminder

When you look for a hotel, it is always advisable to find the hotel's own web site. You can start with a large travel site, but once you found a few hotels which seem to fit your criteria, copy their names and go to <http://www.Google.com>. Enter one name in the search box, and look for the hotel's official web site in the results.

The hotel's web site will usually feature the largest number of photos. It will also offer you the possibility to communicate with the hotel management, and ask your questions.
